 KNOWLEDGE OF THE ISSUES
 INVOLVED WILL ENHANCE YOUR SKILL SET IN
 WORKING IN A CHALLENGING AND REWARDING FIELD.

No one is untouched by death and end of life issues whether among patients, family members of our patients, relatives or ourselves.

Dr. Gary Rodin will outline the theoretical and clinical framework for the evidence-based CALM (Managing Cancer and Living Meaningfully) psychological intervention co-developed with Dr. Sarah Hales for individuals with advanced cancer and their caregivers. Subsequently, Dr. Rodin will show video-taped clinical material from CALM sessions to illustrate implementation. The model incorporates attachment, relational, and existential theories to address concerns among those with advanced cancer and other advanced medical illnesses. Within three to six sessions, the clinician addresses the practical and the profound, in relation to symptoms and communication with treatment team, changes in the self and relationships with others, meaning and purpose; hope and mortality. Dr. Rodin's presentation will heighten awareness and increase clinician's skill in communicating about end-of-life issues.
